

Terms of Use

Welcome to the LARA community! By using the LARA portal, you implicitly accept the following Terms of Use:

1. The LARA software and the LARA portal are made available to you on an as-is basis. The maintainers of the platform will use normal professional efforts to try to ensure that the software works correctly, but we draw your attention now to the fact that the system is still in beta. The maintainers of the platform explicitly disavow all responsibility for any loss that may be incurred by using LARA.
2. All content created on LARA is the property of the owner of the account(s) used to create it, excepting a) contributions to shared resources such as language-specific lexica explicitly designated as such by the platform, b) cases where creation of the content infringes other rights such as third-party copyright.
3. You may remove your own content at any time and no copy will be kept unless you explicitly allow the maintainers of the platform to do so.
4. Data created by logging your use of the platform will only be kept if you explicitly allow it. If logged data is kept, it will only be made available in anonymised form.
5. The maintainers of the platform reserve the right to remove at their discretion content which they consider to contain hate speech, pornographic images, or aggressive and unsolicited marketing. If content is removed from the platform, a warning will first be sent to the content creator, and the content will be saved and made available to them.
6. The maintainers of the platform reserve the right to remove the accounts of users whom they at their discretion consider to be persistently using the platform in an inappropriate manner which is injurious to the other members of the community. If an account is deleted, the owner will first be warned, and their content will be saved and made available to them.